preface the author of this work will not trespass on the indulgence of the reader in the way of preface further than to say that the agricultural portion of it is not meant to discourage improvement but to repress the wild schemes of theoretical men who attend farmers meetings for the pleasure of hearing themselves talk and do more harm than good by the promulgation of their visionary views this work sees the light for various reasons there is a general lack of detailed information about the earliest stages of human motor development the reasons for this are explained more fully in the introduction here we may simply state that apart from their intrinsic interest earlier phenomena are fundamental to the comprehension of later phenomena rooted in them whether pathological or normal this is especially so in the rapidly developing young organism at birth the neonate is catapulted into a profoundly different physical and social environment requiring extremely diverse functioning suffice it to mention aerial respiration no longer being fed through the placenta and the cord and the full impact of gravity on neonatal movements the neonate generally adapts smoothly to the transition as it has been equipped to do so during the 9 months of pregnancy however the study of the early stages of fetal motor development should not be exclusively directed towards the understanding of functioning in the neonate
